FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Greenwich, Connecticut

Completed 1989

The renovation of this church involved adding transepts as well as a new apse to provide additional seating and to allow placement of the organ and choir on the central axis of the building. During the 1950's the ceiling had been dropped and all the woodwork refinished in a light "blond" color. We opened up the dropped ceiling to expose the ceiling structure, moved the large rose window into one of the new transepts, restored the wooden structural members to their original color, designed new lighting, designed an entire new flexible chancel and furnishings, and consulted on the exterior appearance of the building's additions.

The building won an award from the city of Greenwich for the best addition to a building for the years 1985-1989.
